

Sponsored Brands Setup Guide

Formats, eligibility, step-by-step setup, and the mistakes that quietly waste SB budget.

What Sponsored Brands is

Sponsored Brands (SB) puts your brand name, logo, and a curated set of products in front of shoppers at the top of, alongside, or within search results — not a single ASIN like Sponsored Products, but the brand itself. It's the format to reach for once a brand is registered and has more than one product worth cross-promoting.

Eligibility

- Enrolled in Amazon Brand Registry.
- A registered trademark (words or an image) that matches the brand on your listings.
- At least one active, in-stock offer eligible for Sponsored Brands.

Ad formats

Format	What it shows	Best for
Product Collection	Your logo + custom headline + up to 3 products, links to daily landing page on Store	Driving multiple product discovery for a category or bundle
Store Spotlight	Your logo + up to 3 sub-pages of your Store	Sending traffic into a built-out Store with distinct sections
Video	A single video creative + one product	High-consideration or demonstration-heavy products

Setup, step by step

- 1 In Campaign Manager, choose Sponsored Brands, then pick keyword or product targeting.
- 2 Select the ad format (Product Collection, Store Spotlight, or Video) based on the table above.
- 3 Choose 1–3 hero products — pick ones with strong reviews and in-stock inventory; a broken landing product tanks the whole ad's conversion rate.
- 4 Write the headline: lead with a benefit or a clear category statement, not just the brand name restated. "Comfort-fit gym wear built for daily training" outperforms "Acme Apparel."
- 5 Pick the landing destination — a Store page for multi-product browsing, or a dedicated landing page for a single collection.
- 6 Set keyword or product targeting the same way you would for Sponsored Products: start broader for discovery, then layer in exact-match branded and category terms once you have search term data.
- 7 Set a daily budget and bid, then submit for creative review — SB creative goes through moderation and can take up to 72 hours before it's eligible to serve.

Best practices

- Run SB alongside Sponsored Products for the same top keywords — SB captures shoppers still comparing brands, SP captures shoppers ready to buy a specific ASIN.
- Refresh headline copy every few weeks; a stale headline's click-through rate decays even if the keyword targeting hasn't changed.
- Video creative needs the first 3 seconds to earn attention with no sound — most SB video is watched muted in-feed.
- Route Store Spotlight traffic to a Store page that's actually finished — an unfinished Store with placeholder sections wastes the click you paid for.

Common mistakes

- Picking a hero product that's out of stock or has a low star rating — SB spends the same whether the landing product converts or not.
- Leaving the headline as generic brand boilerplate instead of a specific, benefit-led statement.
- Never revisiting SB targeting after launch — SB search term data is just as actionable as SP's for finding new keywords and building out negatives.

Ad format availability and exact creative requirements change periodically — confirm current specs in Campaign Manager before building creative for a launch.
